

KENT ETHNOBOTANY DISSERTATIONS
A Selection

An Ethnobotanical Study of Change in Homegardens on the Dalmatian Islands of Ugljan and Pašman in Southern Croatia

Old Park Anew: Assessing a piece of demilitarised land in Canterbury within a context of historical and contemporary commons.

Go Green-Collar: Identifying Motivations Towards a Career in Public Horticulture

From Mountain to Market: exploring markers of quality, identification and sources of confusion of Lavandula spp. and Thymus spp. through the Moroccan supply chain.

Temples in the Backyard: Druid Home Gardens and the Spiritual Relationship with Plants

Living as Our Ancestors Did: Yanasha responses to globalization in the Biosphere Reserve 'Oxapampa-Ashaninka-Yanasha' (Tsachopen, Peru)

The Ethnobotany of Mitragyna speciosa (Korth.) Havil.: The Local Knowledge, Utilisation and Current View of 'Kratom' Among Folk Healers and Laypeople in the Songkhla Province of Thailand

The Dynamics of Biocultural Diversity: Lessons from a Changing Georgian Viticulture Landscape

Assessing Long-term Impacts of the Projek Etnobotani Kinabalu among the Dusun Liwan of Mount Kinabalu, Sabah, Malaysia

Coexistence of ecology and cosmology: Traditional forest plant knowledge transmission and causal explanations within the Bunong people in Cambodia

Ethnobotany and Drug Discovery: A review of previous and present contributions of the ethnobotany to the discovery of new drugs

Tonoto: Production and Use of Sacred Alcohol by the Hokkaido Ainu in the Context of a Dynamic Culture and Landscape

Understanding the role of ethnic and religious diversity in medicinal plant use between Thai Yai and Lisu Buddhists and Christians in Northern Thailand

Ritualistic plant use of pagan groups in Slovenija

Linking belief to conservation in sacred groves of far western Nepal

Sustainability in extreme environments: The impact of permaculture on residents of Longyearbyen, Svalbard.

Maintaining medicinal plant practices in the diaspora: the sale and use of Jamaican medicinal root tonics in London.

Past, Present, and Future Hopi Plant Use in Bears Ears National Monument

Comparison of the medicinal flora used in the Mayan Kingdom and Spain during the Mexican conquest.

Human biocultural adaptation to changing fodder availability in a Moroccan High Atlas Mountain community.

Temple as the Site of Conservation: Urban ethnobotany and Ritual plant use among the South Indian Diaspora.

Assessing the interface between food and medicine in Ayurvedic Practice.

Biocultural exchange of plant material and associated cultural knowledge regarding use - A case study of the ancient trade of Aloe vera.

In Likeness of Lichens: The Art and Science of Symbiosis.

Identifying indicators of biocultural diversity in East Tyrolean home-gardens.

New transitions of Colonialism and Territory in Colombia: Indigenous adaptations and perceptions in 'post accord' Colombia.

Natural Connection: The Role of Abbey Physic Community Garden in the Health-Seeking Strategies of its Gardeners.